

Crain'S Chicago Business: @properties Is Moving Into A New Chicago Neighborhood

Even though the company's main office is being relocated, it will still maintain a presence on Fulton Street.

Cassidy McAloon
04/05/2017

Chicago's largest locally-owned residential real estate firm is moving its main office. Instead of being in the Fulton Street loft building location that its founders first opened 16 years ago, @properties is moving to River West.

The new office on Peoria Street is set to open up this month. According to Crain's Chicago Business, the 16,000-square-foot space will be the largest-by-volume residential real estate office in Illinois. More than 320 agents who used to be based out of @properties' original office will be working in the new River West location, with plans to bump that number up to 400 within the next few years.

With more than 2,100 agents, @properties is establishing a presence across the Windy City. The brand will also still keep its original Fulton Street office as it moves into another Chicago neighborhood this spring.

To read the original article, click here.